

The decoder32to1's function is to set one bit in the 32-bit output to be 1 and others to be 0 when enable is 1; when enable is 0, all the bits in the output will be 0. The "address" is used to determine which bit to be set to high by shifting the enable bit leftwards by the value of the address.